Venue: The Studio, 67 Hope Street, Glasgow, G2 6AE

2 March 2019

About the Workshop:

This workshop initially provides an overview of dissociation and how it impacts on EMDR processing. There will be an explanation of Ego State Therapy (EST) and how it fits with EMDR to provide the stabilization clients need, as well as dealing with blocked processing. Clinical case material is used throughout to illustrate learning points. Through demonstration and practice participants will learn how to build resources for clients, access ego states in a controlled way and effect therapeutic change. In the latter part of the day, participants will see videos of live cases where EST is used effectively in the Preparation Phase of EMDR to: 1) identify the part-selves, and 2) moderate the malevolence displayed by two difficult ego states.

Learning objectives

- Understand how complex trauma and dissociative disorders impact on processing.
- Understand the concept of working with part-selves as a way of preparing clients for the standard EMDR protocol.
- Learn how to access ego states in a controlled way and effect therapeutic change and stability.
- Learn techniques to deal with difficult ego states.
